TO OPEN AUG. 1

FARMERS TRUST FIXES DATE OF REORGANIZATION.

ELLISON A VICE-PRES'T.

Prominent Young Attorney is Made Officer and General Counsel for Financial Institution.

The opening of the Farmers Trust company, being an amalgamation of the Maryville National bank and the Gillam, Bellows & Pierce Loan company, will be on Friday, August 1. The new company will have a capital stock of $200,000, the largest capital employed in any banking institution in this section outside of St. Joseph. A handsome booklet is now being sent out by the trust company, giving out their plans.

The officers of the new trust company will be George L. Wilfley, president; W. C. Pierce, vice president; C. D. Bellows, vice president; George Robb Ellison, vice president and general counsel; S. H. Kemp, cashier and secretary; Arch K. Frank, assistant secretary. The officers were announced a few weeks ago, except Mr. Ellison, and this announcement comes as a surprise.

GEO. R. ELLISON,
Vice President and General Counsel of Farmers Trust Company.

There will be several departments to the trust company, such as banking, savings accounts, trust estates, safety deposit box department, banking by mail, escrow matter department, farm loan department and the abstract and title department.

The booklet also contains the announcement that the new company will erect a thoroughly modern stone building, taking in all the ground now occupied by the Maryville National bank, the Gillam, Bellows & Pierce Loan company, the Bellows Silo company, the Western Union Telegraph company and the Wells-Fargo Express company. This will be done not later than next year (1914).

Nic Sturm as teller commenced his work with the new institution on July 1. This was given out a few weeks ago.

George Robb Ellison, who is a director and has been made general counsel and one of the vice presidents of the institution, is well known over the county. No confidence in a man was ever more appropriately bestowed. Mr. Ellison was born in this community, and all of his days have been spent here, save the several years he was at school at St. Paul's college, in New York, and at Harvard university, where he graduated. His fine training has not spoiled him. Absolutely truthful and reliable under all circumstances, however trying, his clean life and industrious habits have won and now hold the respect and unreserved confidence of everybody who knows him.

Mr. Ellison is a tireless worker, and by close application has made of himself one of the finest and most reliable lawyers in this part of the state. Unassuming, kind and considerate, he never unnecessarily gives offense, and in business affairs the humblest receive at his hands the same patient and respectful treatment that would be bestowed on the proudest.

It is a fine compliment to Mr. Ellison, who is only 32 years old, and the finest part of it is that it was won, not by any extraneous influence, but through the recognition of his integrity and ability on the part of local capitalists who have known him since he was born.

RECOGNIZED THE PLACE.

Gettysburg Veteran Saw Devil's Den, Where He Was Wounded Fifty Years Ago.

Abraham Walk, who lives on West First street, returned Friday night from Gettysburg where he has been attending the celebration of the fiftieth anniversary of the battle. Mr. Walk said this morning that the trip was a great one but a hard one, and he did not stay there longer than two days. Many of the veterans turned back before they got to Gettysburg, he said.

"Yes, I had a fine time," he went on, "I went over the places where I fought and saw 'Devils Den,' the place where I was wounded. Of course, the grounds are changed with monuments and things, but the general contour of the land is the same, and I had no trouble in recognizing the places of the different engagements.

"I left after the second day, because it was getting too hot for me. I saw men getting sick all around me, and a number of them died. One hospital had over 300 in it, and I was told that the government had ordered 500 coffins to be ready for use in case they were needed. I didn't want to stay any longer, for I had seen all that I wanted to see, so I came home."

Burlington Railroad Would Interest Farmers in the Raising of More Alfalfa.

John I. Hoffman, secretary of the Commercial club has received a letter from the agricultural department of the Burlington railroad asking the people here to assist them in holding an "Alfalfa Day" in Maryville. The purpose of the day is to interest the farmers in this section of the country in the raising of alfalfa. A car with exhibits will be sent here at that time, and lectures on the cultivation of the crop will be given by a number of university men.

TRACKS WERE OUT

RAILROAD SUFFERED BETWEEN HERE AND ST. JOSEPH.

RAIN RAISED THE RIVER

One Hundred and Two Bank Full, While Washouts On Railroad Tracks Were Numerous.

The Burlington tracks to St. Joseph were washed out in many places by the storm of last night. The train which left Maryville at 8 o'clock this morning had gone no farther than Bolckow at noon. Small stretches of track were washed out between Arkoe and Barnard, and Barnard and Bolckow. Just south of Bolckow a stretch of 250 yards was out. It was being worked on at noon, but the train men did not know how long it would be before they could get to St. Joseph.

Homer Shipps came up from St. Joseph this morning in a car. He said that the track all the way to St. Joseph was washed out in places. The 102 river is bank full.

James Todd, who was on the train this morning, telephoned from Bolckow and said that the storm there had been heavy. It was estimated that five inches of rain fell. There was hail, too, but it did not do much damage. The wind had blown down the corn all along the way.

METHODISTS WON FIRST.

Downed Presbyterians 13 to 6—Christians Won Second Game From Baptists 12 to 8.

Saturday afternoon the Buchanan Street Methodists took the first game from the Presbyterians. The game was fast at times, but at other times both teams played poor ball. Ham pitched for the winners and was not in danger at any time during the entire game. He was hit more than he should have been, owing to the fact that some of the Presbyterians were so small he had to let them hit because he was afraid of hitting them. Vandersloot started the twirling for the Presbyterians but was replaced by Ross Scott in the fifth on account of wildness. The second game between the Baptists and Christians was very interesting and both teams hit hard.

Score, first game—Methodists 13, Presbyterians 6.

Batteries—Buchanan Street, Ham and Taylor; Presbyterians, Vandersloot, Scott and Hutchison.

Score second game—Christians 12, Baptists 8.

Batteries—Christians, Burch and Hosman; Baptists, Conley and Wiles.

He took the old furnishings from the Maryville store to place in his store at Corning.

DAMAGE BY STORM

HEAVY HAIL, WIND AND RAIN STORM SWEEPS COUNTRY.

HAIL STORM WAS LOCAL

Barnard and Graham Chautauquas Suffered—Rainfall Heaviest in Years.

Nodaway county was swept by a severe wind and rain storm Sunday afternoon and night which did great damage to the corn and standing small grain. At Maryville the storm was accompanied by the heaviest hail in years, but reports from over the county are that there was little or no hail outside of Maryville. The rainfall in town last night was 3.5 inches, the heaviest since October 1, 1911, when 5.12 inches of rain fell. Last night's rain was also the heaviest July rain since 1909 when there was a precipitation of 6 inches.

The hail was the worst feature of the storm in Maryville. The stones, some of which by actual measurement were 6½ inches in circumference, broke windows and damaged trees all over town. At least one-third of the globes on the White Way poles were broken, and the glass in the two greenhouses were so shattered that there is scarcely a whole pane left. The Strader greenhouse was damaged to the extent of $600 which is covered by insurance. The Engelman greenhouses suffered $2,000 damages, Mr. Englemann said this morning. This is fully covered by double insurance and the stock was not damaged to hurt Mr. Engelmann's trade in any way. Forty-three windows were broken at the Normal and seven or eight at the high school. Many of the stained glass windows in all of the churches were badly riddled by the hail. All over town the windows in private houses were broken.

The wind and rain helped to do other damage to the trees, telephones and electric lights. Manager Todd, of the Hanamo company, said that about forty phones on his lines were out of order this morning and only three toll lines were working. They are being fixed as rapidly as possible and will probably all be in working order today. In many places the electric light wires were torn down and service destroyed. The wind twisted the house of Mrs. L. A. Wilbur on South Market street off of its foundation and tipped it so that the northwest corner of the house is leaning into the cellar.

It is impossible to ascertain the damage done by the storm over the county because of the poor telephone service. It is pretty certain, however, that the hail, at least in its worst, was local in Maryville. Anderson Craig said that it did not extend north of his place in the north end of town. John Thornhill received word from his farm eight miles northwest of Maryville saying that there was no hail there. The wind, however, had blown the corn down badly. George Baker telephoned to his farm east of town this morning and learned that there was only a very light hail there. The oats and corn were both blown down. A report from the Embree farm just southwest of town says that the hail did not reach that place.

Manager Helmers of the light company said today that the damage to the white way and the roof of the power plant amounted to $500. The white way is not insured. It will take several weeks to get new globes to replace the ones broken last night. The lights were turned out last night, he said, because the telephone wires had fallen on the light wires in a number of places.

President Richardson estimated the damage to the Normal building to be between $150 and $200.

Prof. John E. Cameron said that the oats crop on the Normal farm was about one-third destroyed, but the corn was not nearly so badly damaged. Several trees on the campus were blown down, and many limbs were broken from other trees.

The roof of W. A. Bailey's carpenter shop, north of the Christian church, was riddled by the hail as if from the fire of a Gatling gun. It is a composition roof and looks like the lid of a pepper box.

A heavy wind storm struck Graham Sunday afternoon, and another report says that it passed over Maitland. The wind, a straight wind, struck Graham at noon shortly after the morning's chautauqua program was over and the crowd had left the tent. The tent was blown down and torn in a number of places, but as it was empty no one was hurt. The piano was blown off the platform, but was not damaged to any great extent. The tent was put up again in time for the evening program, and the piano was in good enough shape to use.

One of the many freaks of storms took place there. On the table on the platform were two or three glasses and a water pitcher. When the wind struck the tent, although it over turned the piano and broke two of the glasses, the other glass was picked up from the table and fell to the floor remaining unbroken and half full of water.

The Barnard chautauqua was torn up by the storm Sunday night also. Fortunately the storm did not strike until after the evening program. It blew the tent down and tore it badly. A temperary bridge, the only entrance to the chautauqua grounds and just built for this purpose, was washed away, leaving the grounds cut off. The tent was moved to the school grounds Monday, however, and will be ready for the evening program. The afternoon's program was given in the Christian church. There was a light hail with the storm.

The Barnard chautauqua just opened Sunday afternoon. The day was a success and a large crowd was in attendance. After the storm Sunday night many people thought that the chautauqua would not continue for a few days, but the programs are being given without any interruptions whatever.

Motored to Kansas City.

Dr. Jesse Miller drove to Kansas City Sunday in his car and will spend this week there at the State Dental convention, being one of its officers. He was accompanied on his trip Sunday by Prof. H. P. Swinehart, Frank Reavis, Jesse Miller, Jr., of this city, and Mr. Hendrickson of St. Joseph. Mrs. Miller went to Kansas City Monday morning to join Dr. Miller, and will remain until Thursday.

Afraid They Would Kill God.

W. A. Miller of the Bee Hive shoe store brought his little daughter, Harriet, uptown Friday evening to see the display of fireworks, the first she had witnessed on that large a scale. After several sky rockets had swept gracefully high into the air to the delight of the youngsters, Harriet begged her father to go and tell the man to quit, "because," she said, "I'm afraid they will kill God."

A. F. Harvey left Saturday night for a month's trip to eastern points. He will go by the great lakes and the St. Lawrence river to Montreal, through Vermont and to Boston, where he will take the steamer for New York City. He will then go to Washington, where he will attend to some legal matters.

DANGER TO HOME

COMMERCIALIZATION A MENACE TO THE CHRISTIAN LIFE.

CHURCH'S IRREVERENCE

Few Bow in Prayer, Conversation and Laughter Fill House of Worship—A Minister's View.

Rev. J. D. Randolph, the young pastor of the Buchanan Street Methodist church, cannot be regarded as a pessimist, an alarmist, or anything like that, but he has enough ballast in his optimism to enable him to see things pretty clearly.

Sunday night he preached to his congregation very plainly about some of the things that have placed the Christian homes of our country in actual peril, showing that unless a vigorous turning over of some things is made for the protection of the Christian homes of our land by a radical stand taken by those who make up those homes, it will not be long until we will be in as much need of Gospel missionaries as the people of those lands that are regarded as heathen by us. Here are some of the things he said:

We are accustomed to interpret progress solely in terms of commercialism. It is difficult for us to believe that any change in our customs or institutions or trend of life brought about or growing out of commercial progress is not beneficial. If our educational system is criticised we point with pride to our large appropriations and endowments. If our religious life is criticised we call attention to our costly buildings and our high salaried preachers. It is hard for us to believe that if we are prospering commercially, anything else can be very much the matter. We do not realize that this period of great material advancement is one of danger to the Christian home.

The city is the result of commercial progress, but it was unforseen and unprovided for by the founders of our nation. The city has had a profound adverse influence on the Christian home. It has robbed the child of room in which to play. It is pitiful to see little children try to make a playground of the crowded streets of a great city. The greatest problem of the city is how to make a useful citizens of the gangs of idle boys on her streets. But the city has done more than rob the child of his playground, it has by the concentration of wealth produced a great host of idle, parasitic women who consume what the toil of others has produced, but contribute nothing in return to society. They are cursed by the sin of idleness. If an idle man is dangerous an idle woman is more dangerous still. These idle women, in a vain effort to pass away the time, rush from fad to fad. They use various reforms as social ladders. They consider the organizations of the church, such as the missionary societies and Ladies' Aid, old fashioned. They scorn to associate with the plain, every-day women found in these organizations and manage to get elected to some exclusive club for so-called civic improvement or purely cultural ends. Thousands of women are reading Shakespeare and Dante who ought to be reading Robert Hunter on "Poverty" or studying civic improvement who ought to be visiting the sick and poor.

The function of the home is the perpetuation of the race and the fundamental education of the child. But the child educates the parents as truly as the parents the child. Dr. Dyer, professor of sociology at Vanderbilt university, said in a recent article that "a child's chief and divine mission in its early years is to cause trouble, and that the child that causes no trouble is failing in its mission in the world as a child."

What he meant was that it is the God-given mission of the child to train its parents in unselfishness. Altruism is the basis of Christianity. A child in the home helps to prepare the way for the coming of Christ into the home. The first great Christian lesson that the child should learn in the home is that of unselfishness. A child may know all the commandments and be able to repeat the sermon on the

GOODYEAR BALLOON FIRST

Lands at Westbranch, Mich., After Traveling 652 Miles.

Kansas City, July 7.—Unofficial figures on the landing places of the four balloons in the national elimination race made by Aero club officials give first place in the race to the Goodyear bag of Akron, O., which landed at Westbranch, Mich., an estimated distance of 652 miles from Kansas City.

The Aero club officials announced they had telegraphed to New York city and had the distances of the three leading balloons measured on an aeronautical map. The new figures, which are as near correct as they can be made until the Aero Club of America takes the official measurements, place Captain Honeywell second in the race and John Watts in the Kansas City II. third. The measurements follow: Goodyear, 647½ miles; Kansas City Post, 642; Kansas City II., 638.

The Kansas City Post balloon landed at Rockwood, Mich., the Kansas City II. at Goodrich, Mich., and the Million Population Club of St. Louis at Manchester. The unofficial distance of the latter is given as 590 miles.

TRIAL OF RIOTERS STARTS

Work of Securing a Jury Is Begun at Council Bluffs.

Council Bluffs, Ia., July 7.—The trial of the rioters who recently destroyed considerable property in Council Bluffs, under the pretense of lynching the slayer of Howard H. Jones, the young Northwestern fireman, began in the district court this morning, with J. B. Rockafellow, the newly appointed judge, on the bench.

The first of the indicted men to be tried is John J. Bowen, a Great Western switchman, accused of being the leader of the mob that stormed the county jail and compelled the opening of the court house and the city jail in the search for Francisco Guidice, the murderer. Bowen, with a number of others, was indicted for inciting the mob "and advising and counseling the unlawful killing of a human being." There will be many witnesses to testify against Bowen. The penalty upon conviction will be twenty years in the penitentiary.

It is expected that the greater part of the day will be spent in an effort to secure a jury.

mount, but unless it is being taught daily to deny itself for the sake of others it is not receiving Christian training.

Another peril to the Christian home is the spirit of irreverence. So few things are sacred. What an awful spirit of irreverence fills our churches. How few bow in prayer when they first come into God's house! Conversation and laughter precede the opening of the service. There is no feeling of being in the divine presence. There is no reverent hush. A nation or an individual who does not reverence God will not reverence anything. Irreverence in the house of God is but a reflex of irreverence at home. That is the place to begin to teach it. Not long ago I heard a little fellow tell his mother to "shut her mouth." I was sorry for the mother, she was so much embarrassed, but I was more sorry for the child. He was but saying back to her what she had said to him. The mother had been lacking in reverence for her own child. The beginning of all true reverence is the reverence of self. This should be the first lesson taught to the child.

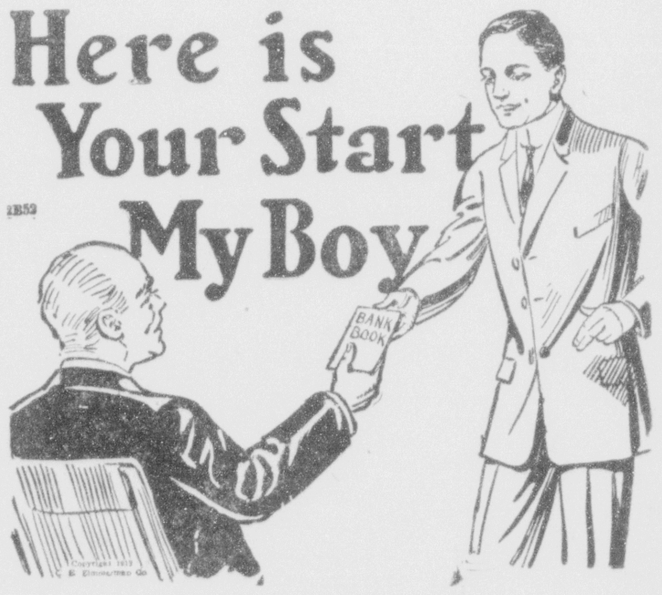
Here is Your Start My Boy



THE BEST PRESENT IN THE WORLD FOR A YOUNG MAN IS A bank book. A book made out in his name showing even one dollar held to his credit in the bank gives him a feeling of rightful pride and self-reliance that he will be quick to add to by weekly savings of his own.

The habit of saving is best formed in youth and the way to start a boy is to open an account and point the way.

A gift of money is a questionable benefit to even the soundest boy; the temptation to squander it is great if you place a large sum in his pocket.

FORTY THOUSAND SLAIN IN BATTLE

Tremendous Losses in Fighting Between Bulgars and Serbs.

SERVIANS HARVEST LOSERS.

Public Being Prepared for News of Great Disaster—Two Hundred Thousand Men Engaged in Conflict. Greeks Make Some Progress.

London, July 7.—After ten days of fighting more severe and deadly in character than anything in the last Balkan war, a little light begins to break upon the hitherto obscure operations.

Desperate fightinfi, with varying fortunes, is proceeding along the Vardar and Bregnalinitza rivers, which seems to be in favor of the Bulgarians.

Important news has been received of the Bulgarian invasion of Servia through Belogradshyk, about forty-five miles northeast of Nish, Servia's most important fortified town. No indication is given of the strength of the Bulgarian column at this point, but the Bulgarians claim to have defeated the Servians and captured five guns and a quantity of other war material, and, by the occupation of the passes, to have opened the road to Nish.

200,000 Men Engaged.

There is heavy fighting [illegible] between the Servians and Bulgarians to the south of Istip and in the neighborhood of Kotchana. About 200,000 men are engaged and the losses on both sides appear to be terrible.

Bulgaria's strategy appears to be to hold the Greeks in check, probably with comparatively small forces, while it deals with Servia. This assumption, if correct, would explain the victorious advance of the Greek army.

Unconfirmed reports credit the Bulgarians with victories near Koprili, giving them the key to Uskup, and with an outflanking movement from the south of Tahynos lake, which would cut off the Greek retreat.

More Greek Victories.

Saloniki dispatches continue to report Greek victories. The Greeks are said to have captured sixteen guns at Doiran. Evidence of desperate fighting is found in the arrival of 8,000 wounded at Saloniki, taxing the town's accommodations and resources to the uttermost.

A conservative estimate of the killed or wounded in last week's fighting fixes the number at 30,000 to 40,000. Thousands of destitute refugees from the scene of fighting are pouring into Saloniki.

The Greeks have made wholesale charges against the Bulgarians of burning and pillaging all the villages they abandon, of committing murders, mutilations and other horrors. More than 4,000 refugees are concentrated at Nigrita and adjacent villages.

Turkey Threatening.

St. Petersburg, July 7.—The Rech asserts that pour parliers are passing between Greece, Servia, Montenegro and Rumania with the object of forming a new quadruple alliance. Rumors are persistent that Turkey threatens war unless Bulgaria evacuates Rodosto and the coast of Marmora.

ENDEAVORERS TO MEET

Thousands on Way to Convention at Los Angeles.

Los Angeles, July 7.—More than 10,000 delegates are hurrying to Los Angeles to attend the international convention of the Christian Endeavor society. A large percentage of the visitors, coming from all parts of the world, are expected to be present at the opening session Wednesday afternoon.

Music will play an important part in the sessions. A choir of 1,000 voices, 500 sopranos, 200 altos, 175 bases and 125 tenors, will be heard during the week.

Relief From Hot Wave Promised.

Washington, July 7.—Relief from the heat wave was promised in the weather bureau weekly bulletin, which says: "Present pressure distribution over the northern hemisphere indicates that unseasonably high temperatures need not be expected during the coming week. In the west it will be warmer tomorrow, though not decidedly so, and some moderation may be expected after the middle of the week."

National Reform Association Closes.

Portland, Ore., July 7.—The National Reform association closed its conference here with a meeting, at which Dr. H. C. Minton of Pittsburgh presided and addresses were made by Ng Poon Chow of China, R. J. Patterson of Belfast, Ireland, and B. A. McDonald of Toronto.

Policeman and Bootlegger Shot.

Champaign, Ill., July 7.—Two men were killed and two others seriously wounded in a duel here between the police and a bootlegger. The dead are: Ray Williams, the bootlegger; Thomas Dodsworth, a policeman. The wounded are: Albert Keller, chief of police; Oliver Harding, a bystander.

Highway Association Incorporated.

Detroit, July 7.—Articles of incorporation have been issued by the secretary of state of Michigan to the Lincoln Highway association. With this legal formality disposed of it is believed that the thoroughfare from coast to coast will now go forward with a rush.

CHILDREN'S SONG AND FLOWER FESTIVAL

Educational Sunday Observed in Salt Lake City Churches.

Salt Lake, July 7.—"Educational Sunday" was observed in all Salt Lake churches in connection with the National Educational association, in convention here. A children's song and flower festival was held in the tabernacle. P. P. Claxton, United States commissioner of education, addressed an afternoon meeting and Brigham H. Roberts of Salt Lake an evening meeting.

First Counsellor Charles W. Penrose of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, in introducing Commissioner Claxton, took occasion to defend some Mormon patriotism and educational methods. Commissioner Claxton pointed out the responsibilities that the teacher is entrusted with and said he felt honored when anyone called him a "school teacher."

MORE RIOTING AT JOHANNESBURG

Settlement of Gold Miners' Strike Proves Ineffective.

BIG MOB JEERS THE TROOPS.

Ballot of Amalgamated Society of Engineers Gives Big Majority for Agreement—Union Men Demand Governor General Gladstone's Recall

Johannesburg, South Africa, July 7.—The settlement of the strike among the gold miners in the Rand district which the government arranged with a committee of strikers proved ineffective.

The mobs reassembled. All trains and street cars suspended service, the crews refusing to work. No newspapers were able to publish. Additional troops guarded the Rand club, the scene of serious encounters. A great mob assembled there, hooting and jeering the troops.

A huge meeting was held to celebrate the strikers' victory. The leaders invited the men to attend the funeral of those killed, whom they describe as "martyrs to a glorious cause."

The suggestion that Governor General Gladstone's recall be demanded was greeted with cheers.

A ballot of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers gave a vast majority in favor of accepting the proposed settlement. The council of the society adopted a resolution providing for the calling of a strike a month hence should the grievances not be adequately redressed.

Union Men Hold Whip Hand.

The federated unions are flushed with success and confident that they are complete masters of the situation. The trades unionists are ready to obey any order given them. The leaders have already commanded the newspapers to cease publication until further notice. They count on the government's fear of the natives, 200,000 of whom are locked in the compounds of the mines. They might start looting and killing if unloosed.

Casualties resulting from the fighting are now estimated at 110. Two officers, three soldiers and several policemen were wounded.

The editors of the various newspapers conferred with the federated union leaders, with the result that the typographical union will publish a paper giving colorless reports of events.

Except at the time of the Jameson raid in 1896 and the outbreak of the war in 1899, Johannesburg has not experienced such a day of terrorism as Saturday. The mobs in the business section caused no less fear than desperadoes, who were threatening to dynamite the homes of the wealthy. All places of business were closed and guarded by troops, while bands of citizens, armed with rifles, patroled the residential quarter.

Rioting Begins.

The rioting began when strikers forced their way into the Rand club, whose members are mine owners. They demolished everything on the ground floor. Three times dragoons scattered the mob, but it quickly reformed. The troops fired a volley over the heads of the rioters and then two volleys directly into their ranks. The rioters fled, leaving behind a large number of killed and wounded. Local troops then took command at the four principal streets, which they swept with their rifles whenever the rioters started to return.

In the meantime, from the roof tops the troops were assailed with missiles and bullets. After almost three hours' fighting, delegates of the strike committee, who had conferred with Generals Botha and Smuts, marched through the streets under a white flag, announcing that an armistice had been arranged and ordering the men to return to their homes. Ambulances went about picking up the wounded during the fighting.

CANYON BEAUTIFUL FANTASY

Grand Canyon, Ariz., July 7.—"It has been all day like a beautiful fantasy. It is hard to believe the wonderful handwork of the Almighty is real. It touches the loftiest emotions of the soul. Some day I am coming back for a long stay. I want to go out to the rim at Maricopa point all alone in the evening and watch the sun set on this most wonderful work of God."

That was the tribute to the Grand canyon of the Colorado river paid by Dr. Lauro Muller, Brazilian secretary of state and special ambassador of the South American republic, who is returning the visit paid to Brazil by former Secretary of State Elihu Root.

Iowan Crowned Near Lincoln.

Lincoln, July 7.—M. J. Hawkins, a business man of Keokuk, Ia., was drowned at a bathing resort near Lincoln. He was in the water with a Lincoln friend, who did not miss him until his body was found at the bottom of the bathing pool by a diver.

Actor Shoots Teammate from Jealousy

Kansas City, July 7.—Jealousy prompted Frank Bailey, a vaudeville actor of Atlanta, to shoot and kill his wife and teammate, Mazie Edwards of Denver, and to commit suicide here. The woman was asleep when Bailey fired the fatal shot.

IT'S A MISTAKE.

Made by Many Maryville Residents.

Many people in a misguided effort to get rid of kidney backache, rely on plasters, liniments and other makeshifts. The right treatment is kidney treatment and a remarkably recommended kidney medicine is Doan's Kidney Pills. Maryville is no exception.

The proof is at your very door. The following is an experience typical of the work of Doan's Kidney Pills in Maryville.

J. A. Murphy, 805 East Fourth street, Maryville, Mo., says: "Some years ago I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills, and I am just as strong in my praise of them now as I was then. I got my first box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Love & Gaugh's drug store, and I do not hesitate to say that they are very reliable in curing kidney trouble and lame back."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

FOUND SNOW BRIDE

Startling Experience of an Artist Who Met Strange Girl in Blizzard.

By GEORGE MUNSON.

Lawrence Harned had put the finishing touches to his picture, and yet he was not satisfied. For four months he had painted it, retouching here and there until at last all was complete except the woman who stood with outstretched arms among the drifting snowflakes. Her face, a type of Southern beauty, Spanish or Italian, had never symbolized the thought of the designer; now, staring unhappily at it, he felt that he could never attain to what he sought.

Harned occupied an attic in Washington square, a huge room which served at once for studio and bedroom. Adjoining this was a smaller furnished room, but he never occupied this. He slept among his paintings, and often in the middle of the night he would spring from his bed to portray the idea which had come to him in the stretches of sleeplessness. Now he looked out at the falling snow, whitening the roofs around him. With a sudden impulse he put on his hat and overcoat and strode down the stairs and into the darkness without.

Then suddenly his heart beat wildly. For there, approaching slowly and uncertainly through the night, was the woman of his dream. She was a girl of perhaps seventeen, slight, wonderful in figure and poise, an Italian, he thought.

"What is the matter?" he asked her. "Are you lost? Are you ill?" But she only shook her head and the tears streamed down her face. He tried her in French, in his unskilled Italian, but in vain.

Harned stared at her in dismay. Then it occurred to him that his duty was to offer her warmth and perhaps food, and, in doing so, he would paint her. This was the model that he had sought so long. Afterward, later that night, undoubtedly he could succeed in ascertaining where she lived and take her home.

She had no fear of him. She seemed like a tremulous, innocent child when he escorted her into the house, up the dim passage and stairs, to his attic at the top of the house.

She seemed naively interested in the pictures that stood round the room, and went from one to another, clapping her hands with delight. But he could not understand a word she said. She was certainly not a European girl. Perhaps she was a Syrian. He took his brush and platette and began deftly changing the face of the woman in the picture. It was midnight before he had finished, and even then he was not satisfied.

"Now you must go home," he said, and pointed toward the door. He put on his hat and overcoat again. But when he made his object evident she began weeping and clung to him, looking up imploringly into his face.

Well, there was nothing but to offer her hospitality. She understood at once and assented eagerly.

Harned was awake betimes the following morning, but when he was dressed and ready to begin breakfast there came a tap at the door and the unknown stood there, beaming upon him. So he prepared breakfast for two and then painted her again.

And he did not telephone for the police. For by this time the novel companionship, and a sense, too, that destiny had sent her to him, had stolen away his judgment. And so for days he painted until at last the picture was completed.

Harned had always lived a very lonely life. It had been one of intense struggles and hardships, too, until, a year before, his pictures had begun to attract the notice of a small group of connoisseurs and had secured him purchasers at a little more than the scanty price which he had hitherto commanded. Now the gentle influence of the strange girl stole into his heart.

He had a mother living in a small town up-state. He resolved to write to her, to ask her counsel, with a view to sending the girl home to learn English and to be put through an elementary schooling. He would not take advantage of her helplessness until she was in a position to marry him of her will. And he knew that only his mother would understand.

He had finished writing the letter on the tenth morning after her arrival. She was preparing lunch over the little gas stove in a corner of the studio.

"I shall be back soon," he said as he put on his overcoat, and she smiled and nodded, just as though she understood. He took the letter to mail and one of his pictures under his arm. This he designed for a certain dealer who purchased his work at a ridiculously low price; nevertheless, it would provide him with food for a month, and, possibly, if he were sharp at a bargain, with enough over for their fares to Hicksville, his mother's town.

As he crossed the street Harned became aware of a swarthy, sinister-looking man who, leaning against the rail which surrounded the park, watched him with a sort of malignant stare that struck him cold with apprehension. Harned hesitated, then, ridiculing his fears, he continued on his way, but more quickly. At the end of the street he paused. The man was still leaning against the rail. Harned now laughed at his terror. Obviously this was some Italian laborer out of a job; but the nervousness which the incident had produced revealed to him the abyss over which his happiness hung suspended. He resolved to get the girl to Hicksville as soon as possible. He was lucky enough to sell his picture at a satisfactory price, and departed homeward, blissfully ignorant that the dealer, who was accumulating Harned's work against the day of his fame, would glady have paid him three times the price he had demanded.

The man was no longer leaning against the rail. Harned hurried into the house. As he did so he became aware that he was still clutching the unopened letter in his hand. He would have turned back to post it, but his fears had awakened again and he hastened up the stairs to his studio, unlocked the door, and ran in. The studio was empty.

He rushed into the bedroom. The girl was not there. She was not anywhere. She had gone as mysteriously as she had come. He called her, ran down the corridors and shouted. A fellow artist came out of his room and looked at Harned with an amused smile.

"Have you seen a girl—my model—dark, with black hair—disappeared!" Harned gasped.

The other's eyelids fluttered upon his cheek. "No, old man," he replied. "Say, if I were you, I wouldn't make such a confounded noise about it, anyway."

All that night it snowed, and all that night Harned paced the streets in a frenzy, looking for her in every woman's figure that hurried by. There were stout and lean women, old and young, some with dark, tousled hair, some frizzled blondes—there was none whom he could have mistaken for his love as far as he could have seen her.

Toward morning he was back in his studio again. He had torn his letter to his mother into fragments, and he was painting again.

Harned's picture, "The Snow Bride," was the sensation of the year at the Exposition of American Painters. In a single day he leaped into celebrity. Bent, the shrewd little dealer who had some 20 of his pictures stored away, now brought them forth and held a Harned exhibition, which netted him nearly $12,000.

One day a knock came at the door, and Harned opened it to find a little tan-colored gentleman at the door, dressed in a well-fitting frock coat and carrying a silk hat in his hand. He introduced himself with a smile and a bow as the Persian consul.

"Mr. Harned, I am looking for an artist to paint my wife," he said. "I was much struck by your painting, 'The Snow Bride.' In fact, I am the purchaser of it, if you will permit me. The price is, I understand, $2,000?"

He went on to speak frankly. He had long wanted a portrait of Mme. Nouriddian, but unfortunately, his means were limited. He hoped that Mr. Harned would not demand an excessive price; he was sure that some day the picture would become a valued heirloom in his family. Harned drank in the man's praise with the thirst of one whose long struggle had at last been rewarded with success. He agreed to be at the consul's apartment the following Thursday at noon, in order to meet Mme. Nouriddian and make that acquaintance which must precede the sitting.

Harned must have arrived too soon, for the consul was not yet home from his office, and Mme. Nouriddian was also out. He was shown into a modest reception room; he was conscious that a young woman was seated there. Next moment the blood rushed to his head. There before him, smiling and tremulous, was the woman he loved.

It seemed like a dream to Harned. A mist swam before his eyes and a dizzy faintness overcame him. He tried to stare out through the encompassing clouds, and, trying in vain, sank into a chair. And then—then she was kneeling at his side and her arms were round him, and her cheek was pressed against his own.

At luncheon Harned, with his sweetheart seated beside him, and the consul and Mme. Nouriddian beaming at him across the table, learned the meaning of his inexplicable adventures. The girl was an adopted daughter of his wife, of a good family in Teheran, who had come to America in charge of a relative who sought his fortune in the new world. Unfortunately this man had proved false to his trust, and had obtained admission for her in the guise of his wife.

I met Harned and his bride in Paris last spring. They are supremely happy. The "Snow Bride" has blossomed into a rose.

ROBBED AT THE TRESTLE.

Geo. Black Celebrated in Maryville and Was Held Up on Leaving Town.

George Black, who came to Maryville from Trenton the Fourth, and who was working for William Pliss in the concrete business, was held up and robbed by three men Saturday night at the Wabash trestle, east of town. Black says the men who robbed him are Peg Conklin, Yats Kinder and Buzzard Hawks. They left Maryville that night and have not been caught yet.

Black said that he did not have enough money Saturday night to pay for his lodging, and so he packed his suit case and started for Atherton's grove to spend Sunday. Monday he expected to go back to work and earn the money to keep himself in town. As he reached the trestle the three men stepped in front of him and began to beat him. They took his suit case, coat, shoes and $1.25.

OMITTED PRIZE WINNERS.

Babies in Class B Were Overlooked Saturday in the List Given of Victors in Baby Contest.

Class B—First boy, Joy Franklin Hanna, Maryville; first girl, Eleanor Nicholas, Maryville; second boy, Harrel Lee Harrington, Maryville; second girl, Eleanor Masters, Maryville, R. F. D.

These babies were unintentionally omitted Saturday when the list of prize winners in the better babies contest were given.

The Nicholas and Harrington babies have slept out of doors each day of their lives since 1 month old, below zero weather not interfering with the habit established for them, and they are splendid specimens of fresh air babies. Eleanor Nicholas was born in the sanitarium at Battle Creek, Mich., in August, 1911. For three months it was not thought she could live. Her mother remained with her at the sanitarium until she was 3 months old, and then brought her home, kept her under the regular system of diet and outdoor sleeping started at the sanitarium, which has resulted in a near-perfect child.

Called by Brother's Death.

Charles Settle of Pickering came to Maryville Monday morning and secured an automobile to take him to St. Joseph, where he was called by the death of his 15-year-old brother, Edward Settle of Burlington Junction, who had been ill at the Ensworth hospital for three weeks. The father of the boy has been with him constantly for two weeks, and on Sunday his neighbors put two binders and thirteen shockers at work in his wheat field and did a full day's work for him. On account of the bad condition of the telephone lines no information could be gained in regard to the funeral services.

THINGS ALL OUGHT TO KNOW

As Christian Bible Students—The Satisfactory Proof of "Why God Permits Evil."

One of the questions which comes to nearly every thinking mind today is "Why does God permit evil?" As we look about us in the world we observe that it is filled with sorrow and trouble, sickness and pain and every trial we could enumerate, and we cannot help wondering WHY GOD ALLOWS IT. We realize that He is almighty and that He could prevent it if He wished. We read in His Word that He is more willing to do for His children than are earthly parents for theirs, and we know how much that means; yet oftentimes it seems that those who try to do and live right have the most trouble. This question is made very clear in a book entitled, "The Divine Plan of the Ages." Every statement is backed by Scripture, and shows that while God does not sanction evil HE HAS HAD A PURPOSE IN ALLOWING SIN AND DEATH TO REIGN THESE SIX THOUSAND YEARS. This and many other subjects of deep interest to all of God's people are discussed fully and in language easy of comprehension.
